ON THE COVER

This year's Young Grower Award winner Nancy Gambino doesn't have a degree in horticulture and she didn't grow up in a greenhouse business. But she runs a successful grower/retailer business in Poplar Grove, Illinois, with passion, perseverance and the determination to always think ahead. Page 40. Photo by Mark Widhalm.

▲ Suntory Flowers Ltd.

There's nothing like it on the market today: Suntory's violas are vegetative, with a propagation success rate of nearly 100%. The vigor of the viola Violina surpasses many other violas, maturing at a 6-in. height with a width of up to 14 in., producing an abundance of uniquely colored flowers that will bloom both in the fall and early spring. Outstanding in hanging baskets and patio containers, Violina Yellow gives a whole new respect for using this species in your garden.
